

To all on the World Peace Alliance mailing:

I assume you all want world peace and prosperity. Why? Is it only so you, and your family will be safe and comfortable? If so, your motive will not help you take an effective spiritual work toward that end.

Certainly, you should seek your own comfort, and that of your family, but if that is the only motive something is missing.

In The Divine Matrix, by Gregg Braden, the power of our commands is addressed. And, there is a perfect illustration that we do not just command peace into our world, and then it immediately appears.

Gregg Braden quotes a Buddhist Monk, “Compassion is both a force in the universe, and a human experience.” So, if we are to seek world peace and prosperity, it must be out of our compassion for all of life. It must be our human experience, and also that which brings the force of our commands to bear fruit.

We have written about soulmates, here, because a major force for peace on earth is the family. The “elite” have sought to break up families to promote their agenda of death and destruction. In seeking to meet a soulmate, or to preserve a soulmate relationship, this advice from Kahlil Gibran is pertinent:

Love one another, but make not a bond of love.

Let it rather be a moving sea between the shores of your souls.

What does that mean in terms of our helping to manifest world peace, and to have a positive affect on our personal lives which includes the soulmate relationship?

As Gregg Braden writes, “The great secret to bringing the focus of our imagination, beliefs, healing, and peace into a present reality is that we must do so without a strong attachment to the outcome of our choice.” In the soulmate relationship, that means that one has compassion for the other, and is not only interested in satisfying oneself. It also means that there is no attachment to the outcome.

Gregg Braden writes, “It seems that the stronger our desire [urgency - anxiety] is to change our world, the more elusive our power to do so becomes. This is because what we want is so often ego based... As we mature into the state of consciousness where we know that we can alter our reality, however, it also seems that it becomes less important to do so.” Similar to the way our desire to drive a car, for example, wanes after we actually begin to do so, in having the ability to work miracles of healing and peace, the urgency to make them happen seems to disappear.” [The book Soulmate Secret says, “savor the waiting.” In other words, there is desire, but no no urgency, no anxiety.]

Gregg Braden writes, “We must first have the feeling of healing, abundance, peace, and the answers to our prayers of well-being in our hearts as if they've already happened before they become the reality of our lives.”

Jesus Christ said:

...if you have faith as small as a mustard seed, you can say to this mountain, 'Move from here to there and it will move. Nothing will be impossible for you.
